

Mouse

Mice are the most commonly studied species. This is because they are similar to humans in many ways. We share about 95% of the same genes. Mice are also small and easy to care for. They help us learn about countless diseases including cancer, diabetes, heart disease and obesity.